

T. Rowe Price Jr. Class of 1914

Founder of T. Rowe Price

Mr. Price was born in 1898 and graduated from Franklin when he was only 16 years old. According to the 1914 Dial, he was a prankster. His specialty was teasing the girls. He was a member of the Franklin Literary Society, and when he is on the program, his class looked forward to being highly entertained. His nickname was "Doc", his favorite slang was "by George", his favorite pastime was "teasing", his accomplishment was "playing tennis" and he was famous for his "long legs". In the "Wanted" section of the yearbook, he stated that he needed "50 lbs of fat".

In 1937, he founded his famous investment firm and sold it to his former employees in 1971. He passed away in 1983.
